SERAX

Home designer Marie Michielssen completes her Earth collection with flower pots, vases and a papier-mâché lamp. For outdoor use, plant pots in terracotta have also been added. Everything comes in primitive-looking shapes, with a texture that accentuates the earthly character of the collection. "With the vases in papier-mâché, I feel my visual language shifting ever closer towards the sculptural. Even with the lamp, it was of great importance to me that it would remain aesthetically interesting when not turned on, explained Michielssen. The designer does not put anything down on paper upfront; no technical drawings or 3D models on a computer. She would much rather let the material speak for itself in the design process.

MARIE MICHIELSSEN

Marie Michielssen has designed for Serax for many years. Home designer Marie Michielssen draws her inspiration from daily life. She lets different stimuli lead and inspire her to make new designs. Her impressions are translated into original designs such as tealights, vases, flower pots and canvass bags which invariably come back in a new form in every new collection. Marie also gives old or forgotten materials a new use.

SERAX

In her play with shapes and proportions, Marie Michielssen this time went to work with the spherical shape. A deconstruction led to an atmospheric lamp in which the light source remains invisible. The paper mache version creates a poetic atmosphere and balances the object on the fine line between art and design.
